This six-hour symposium explores infectious diseases, highlighting prevention, diagnosis, treatment, and emerging public health threats.

Dr. Daniel Caplivski will examine emerging infectious disease threats and public health preparedness. Dr. Gregory Weston will review advances in infectious disease diagnosis and clinical management. Dr. Angela De Cordova will discuss antimicrobial stewardship and resistance prevention. Dr. Heidi Torres will explore infection prevention and vaccination strategies. Participants will also examine nutrition's role in immunity and recovery, and psychosocial and behavioral health impacts that influence patient care and outcomes.
